

Michele Reid
College/University Director

Michele Reid moved to Battle Creek in 2017 when she was hired by Kellogg Community College after earning her PhD in Higher Education Administration with a focus on adult and vocational education from North Dakota State University. (Michele's mother was a northern Michigan native, but Michele's family lived in many areas of the U.S .after her father joined the military. She now intends to retire in Battle Creek.) Michele also holds an Associate degree from Valencia Community College, a Bachelor's in History and Spanish, summa cum laude from the University of Central Florida, a Master's in Library and Media Studies from the University of South Florida, and a Master's in History from Rutgers University. With 40 years' experience in both public and private institutions, including in senior positions in state government, academic libraries, and information technology, she has also been active on regional, state, and local nonprofit boards throughout her career. She is currently serving as President of the AAUW Battle Creek Branch.
